

WELCOME TO THE JUNGLE

In a valley known for technology, innovation and wealth, it is ironic to find the largest homeless encampment in the United States; Over 200 people live in 75 acres of squalor along the banks of Coyote Creek, just across the street from Happy Hollow Zoo. Although Santa Clara County and the City of San Jose provide limited services, like all encampments in the county, the Jungle is under constant threat of being bulldozed and its occupants dispersed. Encompass will follow the people in need, wherever they find refuge.

Map from the Business Insider